

ABSTRACT

In some embodiments, a computer-implemented method for processing lottery sales data comprises: assigning unique identifiers to a plurality of lottery retailers, where the unique identifiers indicate types of lottery games sold by respective lottery retailers from the plurality of lottery retailers; and identifying on a map display on a computer using the unique identifies respective locations of lottery retailers from the plurality of lottery retailers. In some embodiments, a computer-implemented method for processing lottery sales data comprises: identifying on a map display on a computer a location of at least one lottery retailer from a plurality of lottery retailers; and identifying on said map display lottery sales data respective to the at least one lottery retailer representative of lottery sales by said at least one lottery retailer for a selected period of time.